Excerpt: . involves, and thus the fleet, though formidable enough on paper, was without practical military efficiency. It was supposed that in the hour of battle the gunners would miraculously acquire that skill which only training can give, and which should be a matter of habit. We are told by the Spanish Revista General de Marina for August 1898, that there had only been one target practice in the Spanish Navy during 1897, and none in 1898. Even then a very small amount of ammunition was expended. The Colon s log, it is noted by Captain Chadwick, contained no mention of target practice for the year June 14, 1897, to July 3, 1898. In defensive qualities the American ships had a very striking advantage. The Indiana, Oregon, and Iowa were stoutly-armoured battleships, with all their heavy guns behind thick plating, well protected on the water-line,...
